Intensifying Human Desires

Advertising has changed completely man's ways of living. History tells us how primitive man lived. History tells us how man changed his ways of dress, his ways of living, and his every day desires and ambitions. History also tells us how an article was yesterday looked upon as the product of an unbalanced mind, today looked upon as a luxury, and tomorrow looked upon as a necessity. It illustrates the ever changing mind, the ever changing human desire.

Why is it that this constant revolution going on in the human heart between everything new and everything old? It is that intense desire to have those things that will give us greater comfort and happiness.

Now here is where advertising comes in. It is a great educator—a great civilizing or developing force. Its purpose is to keep people informed on the use and value of a commodity and overcome any prejudice that may exist against it.

Look at the automobile. At first the thought of a locomotive running wild in our streets was looked upon as a curse and a thing people would not tolerate. Then shortly the prejudice began to wane and it became looked upon as a necessity. Advertising brought about this wonderful change, and every automobile manufacturer in the country will verify this assertion.

for the necessities of life without their own wage increasing in accordance. The necessity of better farming methods on soil that had been cropped for many years has had its effect upon the farming in general and with a greater interest being taken in the agricultural colleges and those great institutions getting right out to the farmer, we're going to change the order of things. If farm products are going to remain higher, the producer is going to get his share of the profits and the wage earner is going to get paid in proportion to the other fellow. This applies to Harney county as well as the older settled communities. We are just as up to date in farm methods as any of them, even though we are cut off from markets. The Harney county farmer can and will be just as independent—or more so—than the fellow out where competition is keen and where the market is established by the man "higher up." While we may not have some of the advantages in some respects as the man along the railroad line, we have the opportunity to make good in an agricultural way. What we produce is as good or better than can be raised in other localities and if we can't market it one way we can another. Agricultural experts are continually telling us the proper way to farm is to sell everything that leaves the farm on hoof. Well, what country on earth can raise better beef or hogs than the Harney county. We haven't found anything produced in Harney county a drug on the market yet unless it be the immense wild hay crop of the past two years and the farmer and stock man is responsible for that himself by not having the foresight to hold more stock to eat it or devoted the land to more profitable crops.

A reporter in a Portland paper the other day has Traffic Manager Miller of the O.-W. R. & N., saying "If alfalfa can be grown in Harney county it means cattle and hogs can be grown and in cattle and hogs lurks the money both for the farmer and the railroad." We don't believe Mr. Miller said any such thing. If he did he's about as stupid a man as has ever visited Harney county. There isn't any "if" about it and Mr. Miller knows it as well as any other man on earth as he has not only seen many acres of alfalfa growing here but he is also well aware of the fact that about all the trains have hauled out of Juntura since the track was laid there has been Harney county cattle and he also knows that if ever they get the rails into Harney Valley that the Portland packing houses are not going to be "hollering their heads off" for hogs, for Mr. Miller has also seen the real hogs growing right here on his visits. It is amusing to notice how those newspaper fellows down there mix things. The Harney county exhibits that brought forth the article showed we grow alfalfa as well as about anything else that one would expect in the northwest. Mr. Miller should not allow those fellows to get away with such statements as it not only is an injustice to a section his railroad wants to build up for future traffic, but makes him appear rather stupid and unobserving.

The writer made a visit to the big plow again this week and noted quite a change in the vicinity. Several hundred acres have been plowed since the big plow got to work and it is not alone in the work as men and teams have been busy all around it. Mr. Weittenhiller now has a section and a half plowed and ready for seeding. He will seed one section next spring half to oats and the other half to barley. The sage brush grubbers are busy clearing another section for the Oregon & Western Colonization Co. and Mr. Eberly is having a quarter section cleared and also having the land recently purchased from Homer Mace plowed. Many of the other farmers are breaking up more land and the country is going to look like a regular farming section next year as compared to the past.

President Wilson is dealing with Mexico in a human way and trying to avoid war. Several newspapers that have been inclined to make fun of his policy are now looking at it in a different light, especially when it appears that this policy is meeting the approval of all the big foreign countries.

And that the tax delinquent and uncollected on the current tax roll will be.....$10,855 00

The County court being fully committed to the policy of keeping the value of county warrants at par, so that all persons paid by county warrants will receive full value for the same, have found, that in addition to making the estimates for the proposed expenditures for the year 1914, it is necessary to make such provision for the reduction of warrant indebtedness as will permit the payment of all warrants within one year from the date of issuance, to obtain the above result, consideration had to be given, not only to the present warrant indebtedness but, also, to the indebtedness to be incurred up to April 1st, 1914, making the proposed amounts to be raised by taxation cover the expenditures for one year and five months.
R. T. HUGHET, County Clerk.
